

WILL CONTINUE ORLAND PARK HIGH SCHOOL

That the two year high school of the Orland Park school will be continued for the next term was fully decided on Monday in the office of County Supt. of Schools Edward Tobin in Chicago. Mrs. H. Adele Cooper, president of the Orland Park school board and members of a citizens committee from Orland conferred with Mr. Tobin and ways were found to overcome the financial problem which had threatened to make the abolishment of the second year high school course necessary.

A meeting of the parents of children of high school age and members of the Orland Park school board was held last Saturday night in the school auditorium to discuss the matter.

Mrs. H. Adele Cooper, president of the school board outlined the difficulty of the non-high school district to find funds with which to keep the high schools operating and paying tuition fees of students attending other high schools. After discussing the matter pro and con a committee consisting of Harold Kinney, Dr. W. R. Schussler, Rev. Paul T. Sanders, and Rev. A. Lach was appointed to confer with Mr. Tobin with the result outlined above. It is understood that about 45 students will be enrolled in the Orland Park high school the coming term.

Oat Crop Runs To 75 Bus. Per Acre

Farmers all over this section are reporting bumper grain crops. Oats run from 50 to 60 bushels to the acre and are of good quality. Chas. Erickson, well known auctioneer of Orland township had one piece of an oat field which yielded 75 bushels to the acre.

Wheat has been greatly harmed by the chinch bugs. Chas. Lauffer in Homer township had 18 acres of wheat which yielded a total of 190 bushels.

The low grain prices do not allow the farmer any profit for his work. Much of the grain is ground up on the farms and used for cattle feed.

Frankfort Contractor Lands Big Job

Signs of returning activity in the building contracting line were seen the past week when Henry Breidert, well known Frankfort building contractor was awarded the contract to erect a two story eight room brick residence for Dr. S. W. Becker, of the University of Chicago, at Olympia Fields along the Lincoln highway northeast of Matteson. The building is to cost $16,000.

To Build New School In Frankfort District

The special election held in school district No. 156 in Frankfort township last Saturday, resulted in the carrying of three special propositions that were placed before the voters of the district which is located in the McIntosh subdivision on the Lincoln highway east of Frankfort and known as "The Lincoln Estates".

The first proposition for the selection of a school site resulted in the choosing of lot 95 at a cost of $250.

The second proposition was to authorize the board of directors to erect a new school building. This carried.

The third proposition was for the floating of a $2500 bond issue which proposition received 47 aye votes and 4 nay votes. A total of 51 votes were cast.

The plans for the new school house have been drawn by architect J. F. Coyle of Joliet. The building is to be of frame construction with a capacity of 45 pupils and will be fully equipped with heating plant, inside toilets, library, etc. The total cost of the new school will be $2800.

Work is to begin soon as the bonds are sold. It is estimated that the new school can be built in three weeks and will be ready when school opens in September.

Finish New Bridge At New Lenox

The right of way on this street not having been fully secured the paving of this highway, which when completed, will connect with the Lincoln highway in New Lenox and with Maple road two miles north will be held up until all the right of way is secured.

Tinley Mail Carrier Finds Stolen Pouch

Late Tuesday afternoon a mail pouch was stolen from the Rock Island depot grounds in Blue Island. Directly after the mail pouches had been thrown from a mail train a man was seen to grab one of the bags, toss it into a waiting car and make a quick get-away. Wednesday morning while rural carrier Chas. Maybee of the Tinley Park post-office was making his rounds he discovered a mail pouch lying on top of a mail box at 159th & Crawford. He brought the pouch to the Tinley Park post office and the Chicago post office was notified. Later in the afternoon two postal inspectors called in Tinley Park. The pouch was locked and when the inspectors opened it they found only a few letters in it. It is thought the mail robbers were looking for registered mail but the wrong pouch was taken and when the robbers discovered the error, they ditched the pouch.

Judges Praise Tinley Park Gardens

The judges of the first inspection of the National Yard and Garden Contest sponsored by the Lions club of Tinley Park which was done as per schedule last Thursday, all stated they were much impressed by the numerous well kept and beautiful homes and gardens in Tinley Park and wondered why many of these were not entered in the contest.

For the first of such a contest being held in Tinley Park, they thought a very fine start had been made.

They also all voted that they had had a most enjoyable day and experience and will look forward with pleasure to the next and final inspection.

After the next inspection, the scores will be averaged and the standing of the leading contestants ascertained.

For the benefit of contestants we herewith publish the items listed on the score cards, showing how the score rating is considered by the judges. This scoring is standard with the Yard and Garden Contest Association of America and its use in any local contest allows the local contestant to be automatically entered into the national contest and eligible for winning a national prize as well as a local one.

The points considered in scoring will be for front yard attractiveness, general impression, homeliness, details, etc., possible points 25.

Rear grounds, livability, attractiveness, details, flower garden, garden features, etc., possible points 60.

Alley, service area, garage, etc., possible points 10.

Tinley Lions Prepare For Song Fest

The Lions Club of Tinley Park will meet next Monday evening at 8 p. m. All members interested in joining in the practice to sing at the Chicago and Music Festival on Aug. 20th are requested to be present for the first rehearsal. It is expected that some of the Midlothian Lions will be present to join us. This is a great opportunity to boost for the Lions and the local club. A. O. Fokett, past president of the Tinley Lions says "We must not let the Kiwanis get away with that trophy, without giving them at least a good fight. We will not have a look in unless everybody who can possibly do so, joins in and practices. It is that that four rehearsals will be sufficient but everybody should be on hand for the four."

Second rehearsal date will be announced at next meeting.

Orland Suspends Special License Fees

In order to relieve an extra burden from the local business men, the village board of Orland Park at their last meeting decided that in this time of depression it would be expedient for the board to suspend the ordinance calling for special license and payment of special license fees for operation of meat markets, delicatessen stores and poultry dealers in the village of Orland Park.

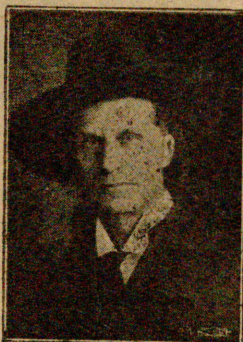

The president and board of village trustees decided that the collection of such a fee at this time would render a hardship on the dealers as well as the consumers and passed a resolution to declare these special licenses inoperative and suspended for the period of one year, effective August 1st, 1932.

Mokena Man Offers Aid to Pa., Mayor

Don C. Hall of Mokena who will take a prominent part in the speaking campaign preceding the November election, has sent the following letter to Mayor McClosky of Johnstown, Pa.:

Mokena, Illinois, July 31, 1932. Hon. Eddie McClosky, Johnstown, Pa.

Dear Sir: I cannot speak to highly in commendation and praise of your brave and determined stand and your humanitarian attitude in offering your protection and a haven of refuge in Johnstown for the men, women and children of the B. E. F., As the first to raise my voice for the service men and the ex-service men and in view of my association with the Bureau of Information during the entire period of the war as a free will offering in the interest of those at the front, and my continued interest in behalf of our country's defenders past and present, I feel that I am qualified and capable of rendering consistent judgment with regard to the present situation and the activities of the so called Bonus Army. Without further comment, I want to assure you of my moral support and to proffer any possible personal assistance that could be rendered by Mrs. Hall and myself.

With best wishes, I am, Yours Fraternally,

DON C. HALL

Mr. Hall, in giving his views on the present political situation says: "Never in the history of American politics have we so nearly approached a crisis as now."

"Never have we been in such grave danger from the idiosyncracies of the 'Pied Piper' stampeded protagonists of political partisanship as we are today. The glimmer of hope must come from the protasis arranged by the few sober minded among the rapidly vanishing intelligentsia of the forgetting and forgotten electorate. Sober judgement must be mobilized. Everything depends upon the independent personal decision of unbiased thinkers who neither attempt to deceive themselves or to deceive others. We must keep in the highway of sanity. Let the piebald puddle jumpers take the ditch."

"The thought of today will provide the bulwark of tomorrow or the indefinite continuation of disastrous destruction of true American ideals."

Mokena Garden Club Drops Appeal To Save Trees

At the meeting of the Mokena Garden Club held Tuesday afternoon in the Mokena village park, the club president, Mrs. L. G. Bruder announced that Mrs. Jennings, president of the Joliet Garden Club and Miss Melchor, secretary of the same club had requested that the question of trees on the C. M. Cleveland farm which figure prominently in the fight Mr. Cleveland is waging to prevent the Wolf road right of way from going thru, be brought up. While this problem is not a new one for the Mokena Garden Club, expression was given by the club members that whereas the Mokena Garden Club is seeking to perpetuate natural beauty, yet it was felt that where trees stand in the way of progress of the community and the welfare of its citizens, the trees should be sacrificed. Wonderment was expressed as to why the Joliet Garden Club was consulted on a local question whereas the local club has never been approached. A unanimous vote was cast to the effect that this question of the trees on the Wolf road right of way thru the Cleveland farm be tabled.

In order to prevent motorists hitting the village fire plugs, Mokena has placed an orange colored steel rod four feet high alongside of each fire plug on the front street. Recently Simon Hohenstein damaged his new car when he accidentally hit one of these fire plugs which was so low that it could not be seen from the car. The fire plug in front of the old school house has been hit several times and has been badly bent.

The Value of a Savings Account

Many people are saving more money now out of reduced incomes than they did in their most prosperous days.

They are doing this not because they have been told to be thrifty, but because the past two years have shown more clearly than ever before that there is no substitute for a steadily growing savings reserve in a strong, well managed bank.

Steady deposits made by the average citizens of every community, are laying a new and solid foundation for the progress of the future.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Hiram L. Williamson
Illinois State Association

A group representing Chicago and Illinois governments went to Washington on July 15 to pave the way to obtain the state's share of the unemployment relief money as soon as federal funds are available. They conferred with officials of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, to whom congress has appropriated $300,000,000 for state-aid purposes. Under the law as adopted, Illinois may borrow $45,000,000. As relief funds, appropriated by the Illinois legislature, will be exhausted about August 1, officials of the relief committee are anxious that a share of the money be obtained immediately. It is understood that Illinois will be able to get a loan upon presentation by the governor of a certificate of need and without calling a special session of the legislature; the administration of the funds will be in the governor's hands.

H. S. Hicks, chief clerk in the offices of the state tax commission, has issued another statement on taxes in which he says that taxpayers of Illinois pay higher levies than those of Wisconsin, but fare better than taxpayers of Indiana. According to the report, total taxes in the northern Illinois counties are approximately $13 higher per capita than across the line in Wisconsin. Eastern Illinois counties as compared with adjoining Indiana counties are approximately $18 lower per capita.

Corn prospects in Illinois are the best in six years, although acreage has been decreased slightly under that of last year, according to the July crop survey of the state and federal departments of agriculture. The survey also shows favorable conditions for soy beans, alfalfa broom-corn, cotton and garden crops. Winter wheat is a spotted crop and below earlier indications, due chiefly to varying fly damage. Tame hay and potato prospects are above average. Other small grains and pasture crops are somewhat below average, according to the report. With the exception of a rather light crop of apples, tree fruit production does not amount to much in Illinois this season.

An exhibition of no less than 500 milk goats at the Illinois State fair, August 20 to 27, has been forecast by Milton E. Jones, general manager of the exposition upon receipt of assurance that the milk goat enthusiasts of Illinois will lend complete co-operation. The estimate of 500 head is the goal of the Illinois Milk Goat association, an organization that grew out of the state fair show, and has helped to place it among the leaders in the United States.

"The Public Library and the Economic Depression" was discussed by Michael F. Gallagher of Chicago, former president of the Illinois Library association, over WMAQ, Chicago, on July 16. This was one of the series of weekly programs being given by the association in an effort to assist people in obtaining from the public library help in solving some of their present pressing problems. This series is given in conjunction with weekly programs of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers, which are given each Saturday at 10:40 a. m. The library program is at 10:50 a. m.

The state of Illinois will place an embargo against the importation of farm products that may harbor the European cornborer as the result of the federal government's recent suspension of its quarantine near the Indiana line. The national government failed to provide funds for the work. Plans for the state's action for protection against the threatening invasion of this pest are in process of formation in the plant industry division of the state department of agriculture.

The Supreme court at its October term, will be asked to reconsider its 4 to 3 decision by which it recently held invalid the law permitting former service men to peddle without a license any goods not regulated by city ordinance; notice of a petition for rehearing in the case has already been received.

With the revision of the Illinois criminal code foremost in their minds, members of the judicial advisory council in Illinois held a conference at Chicago on July 8 with A. S. Cuthbertson, state senator and chairman of the council, presiding. The committee was designated by Governor Emmerson. It will proceed along lines calculated to assure reforms being enacted into a law at the next session of the legislature. The readjustment of penalties in criminal cases is one of the main objectives, according to officials.

Tribute to Shakespeare

What makes Stratford forever a sort of mecca is Trinity church, on the picturesque River Avon, which gives its name to the town. In Trinity church is the tomb of Shakespeare, which has become another shrine, not only for America but for all the world. This simple stone slab, with the bust of the poet above, which was erected long years after he was buried, under which the bones of the great dramatist lie, has been visited by more people than any other tomb in the western world.—Boston Herald.

During the first half of 1932, Illinois completed 470.4 miles of its state and county highway systems, Frank T. Sheets, chief highway engineer, has announced. State bond issue routes were extended 250.13 miles since the beginning of the year and county roads had added 220.27 miles of highways.

The county fairs of Illinois will get about 57 cents on the dollar in the 1932 distribution of state aid for premium reimbursements, according to a calculation recently made by the state department of agriculture. If the fairs now eligible to participate in state aid pay out as much as their recorded intentions indicate, the claims will total about $38,208.92. The fund available, $215,677.34, is about $164,531.92 less than the claims anticipated.

Horse breeding in Illinois is again trending upward after a decline that has continued since 1918, according to the state department of agriculture. The most rapid decline in the horse breeding business, it is stated, was experienced between 1918 and 1925—the period in which motor trucks and tractors came into prominence. There was a slight upturn in 1925, but since that year and up until the present time, there has been a gradual reduction.

Dr. M. M. Leighton, chief of the Illinois State geological survey, has received notification from Dr. W. W. Campbell, president of the National Academy of Science, of his appointment as a member of the national research council on the Division of Geology and Geography for three years, beginning July 1, 1932. This work is advisory in character and will not require absence from his duties as chief of the geological survey. Doctor Leighton has also been informed by Dr. J. McK. Cattell, editor of the Biographical Directory of American Men of Science, that he has been selected as one of twenty-five geologists from among one hundred leading geologists of the United States.

A determined effort to solidify public sentiment throughout all Illinois in favor of a well defined and well organized protest against irrational levying and spending of public funds is being made by the Illinois Chamber of Commerce in a series of radio broadcasts from station WMAQ in Chicago on Wednesday evenings from 6:15 to 6:30 p. m., standard time. On July 27 Joseph K. Brittain, president of Joseph K. Brittain and company, will speak on "Taxes and the Real Estate Owners." "Taxes and the Retail Business Man" will be the topic of a talk on August 3 by Frederick H. Scott, vice president, Carson Pirie Scott and company.

A $78,377 decrease in revenue collected by the state division of insurance was registered during the fiscal year ended June 30, compared to the previous year. Privilege taxes fell off $81,277 and the fire marshal taxes declined $22,396 below the previous year, while fees of the division showed an increase of $25,296. Total collections were $8,083,971.

The library extension division has published revised editions of two reading courses: "American Painting" and "Appreciation of Art." Both lists were compiled by Miss Leila Mechlin, secretary, American Federation of Arts. The first course traces the development of American painting, while the second points out the significance and beauty of art. The books suggested in each list may be borrowed from the library extension division, Springfield, if not available in a local library, and the division will issue a certificate to anyone completing the reading requirements for either of these courses.

On the basis of its budget for the academic year of 1932-33, which is reduced $649,000 over a year ago, coupled with a saving of approximately half a million dollars on the year just closed, and an elimination of capital expenditures, a total of possibly 22 per cent of the funds appropriated to the University of Illinois by the last general assembly, will go unused, H. W. Chase, president of the university has pointed out. The saving has been made by the university in view of the difficult position in which the state has found itself as a result of decreased and delayed taxes.

Tentative plans for the Illinois building, where the state of Lincoln will act as host and "official greeter" to the Chicago Century of Progress visitors in 1933, have been submitted to Gov. Louis L. Emmerson by C. Herrick Hammond, state supervising architect. The building will be constructed just east of Soldiers' field. It will be a structure of modernistic lines featured by a center motive with a pinnacle, which will be lighted at night and give the appearance of a fountain in full play.

Rates for public utility services, which have been consistently reduced for ten years through regulation, now are considerably below general living cost figures and in the case of electricity are far below those prior to the war, according to figures which have been made public by the Illinois Commerce commission. The drop in the price of electricity has been so marked that today the rates for residential and commercial service in the twelve larger cities is 30 per cent below that in 1913. Virtually all Illinois communities show similar savings.

Indication of Returning Prosperity

EMPLOYEES of the Des Moines assembly plant of a big automobile manufacturing company were called back to work the other day after months of idleness. The reopening of the plant was hailed by the Iowa city as a sure sign that prosperity was returning, and the parade put on by the workmen was heartily cheered.

OUR EVENING STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

NO ONE has much of anything to do with Rattles the Kingfisher. He and Mrs. Rattles live their lives quite by themselves. Others of the little feathered people are very social, and you often find them together. Many of them are close neighbors in the Old Orchard, and when the time comes for the long journey to the far-away sunny Southland a great many of them journey together, and the same thing is true when they come back in the spring. But the Rattles family is not social. Mr. and Mrs. Rattles always are found by themselves, and if the truth must be told, they seem to prefer it that way.

Now I suspect that it is partly because they want to be alone and partly because the other birds will have nothing to do with them. And the reason that they will have nothing to do with Rattles is because they do not understand him. In the first place, he isn't at all like other birds save that he wears a feathered coat and flies. He perches in trees, but never walks or hops about on the ground. Yet he makes his home in the ground, a thing that no self-respecting bird does save one other, a cousin of Skimmer the Swallow.

Mr. and Mrs. Rattles Always Are Found by Themselves.

Pert little Jenny Wren, the gossip of the Old Orchard, happened to hear his rattle as he flew over the Old Orchard one day, and it set her gossip little tongue to going as only it can go. There isn't any tongue that can wag faster than that of Jenny Wren.

"Just hear that noisy fellow," said she. "I don't wonder he and Mrs. Rattles want to live by themselves. If I had a voice like that I would want to do the same thing. Did you ever hear such a voice? Isn't it awful? He can't sing a single note, and I've heard say that when he makes love to Mrs. Rattles he doesn't have a single soft note. Blacky the Crow has a harsh enough voice, goodness knows, but he can soften it when he wants to. The same thing is true of Sammy Jay. He screams most of the time, but sometimes his voice is really beautiful. There must be something wrong with anyone whose voice is always as hard as that of Rattles. And then, too, his head is too big for his body. I never could bear people with big heads."

"But you will have to admit that Rattles has a handsome coat even if he hasn't a fine voice," spoke up Welcome Robin with a sly wink to Goldie the Oriole. You know Jenny Wren has a very sober coat, a plain little brown coat.

Jenny tossed her head and jerked her tail. "Fine clothes never make fine people," she snapped. "I would rather have a fine voice than a fine coat. Rattles has rather a good-looking coat, though I don't know as I would call it handsome. He needs something good. I'm told his home smells something awful. But what could you expect of anyone who lives in a hole in the ground and eats nothing but fish?"

"I live in a hole in the ground, and I know a good many others who do the same thing, and let me tell you that our houses are as neat and clean and sweet as those of people who live in holes in trees," spoke up Johnny Chuck, who had been listening. "For my part I think Rattles the Kingfisher has more sense than some people I could mention, if it is true that he makes his home in a hole in the ground."

"That is all right for you folks who cannot fly," retorted Jenny Wren sharply, "but for a bird—Bah! It gives me the feeling that he is only half bird. And they say that he makes his nest of fish bones! Did you ever hear of anything like that? No self-respecting bird will have anything to do with another who lives in a hole in the ground and uses fish bones for a nest. Fish bones! Think of it!"

"I don't know that that is any worse than using Mr. Blacksnake's old clothes to line a nest with, and that is what Cresty the Flycatcher does," said Chatterer the Red Squirrel, who had been listening.

"Certainly it is!" snapped Jenny Wren. "And then think how the place smells!"

And so Jenny Wren chattered on and on, and the other birds said little. But it was clear to Johnny Chuck that they agreed with Jenny Wren. They didn't like Rattles the Kingfisher, and all because he didn't live as they did.

WITH SOUR CREAM

AS OFTEN sour milk and cream accumulates, one must be alert to make the best use of such valuable food.

Johnny cake is one of the best of hot breads to use the sour milk or cream. If one has cream, the shortening may be lessened or left out entirely.

Sour milk and sour cream may take the place of the sweet milk in any recipe when using flour. A bit of soda, often not more than an eighth of a teaspoonful need be added and the usual baking powder used as in the recipe for sweet milk. It is better to stir the soda into the sour milk or cream, seeing that it is well dissolved, before adding to the flour and egg mixture.

When sour cream is to be substituted for fat, one must remember that it takes the place of some of the liquid as well as fat. A very little experience will enable one to judge of the richness of cream and the exchange when using it instead of butter.

Another point to be remembered is that sour milk needs a bit more thickening than sweet, as the lactic acid acts on the gluten of the flour, softening it.

Sugar Cookies.

Take one cupful of sugar, one egg, one cupful of thick sour cream, one-half teaspoonful of soda, flour to roll—about two cupfuls—two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of lemon extract and a grating of nutmeg. Mix and roll out only a portion at a time. Brush the cookies

THINK twice before you write a letter.

The things to say, the words to find.

Will it make someone happier, better. More pure of heart, more clean of mind.

Or make the eyes a little wetter With thoughts unkind?

Think twice before you write a lover, Think twice before you write a friend.

Shall what you write seem sweet as clover,

More firmly bind and closer bend, Or shall it say that all is over And at an end?

Think twice, life's sea may more divide us

Or may unite us; good or ill; Our letters ships to those denied us That make them near, or farther still.

Yes, they may come and sit beside us, If we but will.

Think twice before a letter leaves you, And, if your pen was dipped in gall, Though friends are false, though love deceives you,

Though visions fade and castles fall—

Then you would better, though it grieves you,

Not write at all. (© 1932, Douglas Malloch.)—WNU Service.

Artificial Silk

A substitute for silk has been sought for a great many years. As early as 1855 George Audemars of Switzerland patented in England a process for making artificial silk like filaments from collodion and liquid rubber. The artificial silk industry was not established on a practical basis, however, until the invention of a French count, Hilaire de Chardonnet, who exhibited a cellulose yarn in Paris in 1899. His process has been improved and developed into the rayon of today.

SYNOPSIS

Ragged and starving, a boy of about sixteen is found in the woods by a camping party. He has fled from his brutal father, Bat Morryson. Fed, and in clean clothes, the boy, Shad (Sheridan), is sent to Canton, with a letter to Colonel Blake. The colonel, his wife, and young daughter Ruth, are impressed by the boy's manner. He goes to work in the village of Amity Dam, and becomes friendly with a youth of his age, "Bumpy," and Bumpy Brown, tinker and village character. Bat Morryson tries to take his son back to his own dissolute life but is overawed by Colonel Blake, the district attorney, and his father passes out of Shad's life. Shad applies himself diligently to his neglected education. Love for Ruth Blake takes a strong hold on his heart. In an attack made on the Perry family, Oscar Perry, the father, is fatally shot, and his daughter, Mrs. Doolittle, wife of Cyrus Doolittle, prominent citizen, shot and seriously wounded. Circumstantial evidence points to Bumpy Brown as the assassin, and he is arrested. Shad loses his job, and goes to live with Bony. The two boys seek and find disguises the murderer had worn. Colonel Blake is almost convinced Bumpy Brown is not the murderer.

New clothes, shirts, collars, neckties, underclothing, a derby hat and a leather suitcase were carefully selected. When they left the store the colonel surveyed the boy with admiration.

"It is a perfect job," he said. "Send the bill to me."

They got new shoes at another store and went to a barber shop. There the colonel insisted that Shad have a trimming and a bath and fresh underclothing. When they entered the colonel's house about seven-thirty that evening Shad was stepping proudly. Mrs. Blake embraced him and said that he was handsomer than ever. The girl Ruth shook his hand.

"I am to be kind but dignified to you," she said with a smile.

"When I come again I think that I will wear green glasses," the boy answered.

"Why?"

"They will give you a kind of a sickly look and make it easy for me to behave."

The colonel and Mrs. Blake laughed, betraying a note of awareness.

The girl sat down and began to survey the boy. She was impressed by his grandeur. He thought that she was more beautiful than ever, and he was right.

"This boy has done important work in the case of the People against Brown," the colonel said to his wife. "He and a young friend have found the hat and handkerchief that covered the head and face of the murderer. He has discovered other convincing evidence. I am to try to make a lawyer of him. It ought to be easy. This young chap has almost convinced me that his friend Bumpy Brown is not the man we want."

He told his wife of Shad's finds and adventures.

Mrs. Blake embraced the boy and congratulated him.

"You really are getting along," she said.

The colonel was weary. He arose presently and suggested to his young friend that they go to bed. Shad arose and said good night. The girl gave him a pleasant smile as he answered. He thought that he saw a note of disappointment in her eyes. The girl went with him to the foot of the stairs and whispered with sweet encouragement in her eyes:

"How grand you look!"

He went upstairs with the colonel who showed him to his room.

He came downstairs at eight o'clock in the morning and Ruth met him in the hall and looked into his eyes with a sweet smile as she said:

"How lazy you are! I've been up an hour waiting for you."

He was happy as he stammered, rather awkwardly: "If—if I had known that I would have been up at daylight."

Ruth blushed, saying: "I have got to hurry away to school now."

It was not quite true but it was a part of the old strategy. She knew that it would pain him to see her go and there was a kind of joy in the thought of his bitter and devastating disappointment. So she left him. Before she had gone a block she pretended to have forgotten something and came back and shook hands again.

Shad went with the colonel to his office. That day the boy was comfortably settled in a furnished room. His wages were to be twenty-five dollars a month. He was to get his meals at a small restaurant. It was a speculation on the part of the generous lawyer—like that of putting a colt in a training stable. The boy was quick to learn. Moreover, he had a mind of his own, and agreeable manners.

The country was now at war with Spain. A messenger came one day from the War department to consult the colonel. It was then that Shad learned that Colonel Blake was an acknowledged authority in devising and reading cipher messages used in war.

Facts of vital interest were discovered regarding the weapon used in the killing of Oscar Perry. The brief of Colonel Blake submitted to the Appellate division of the Supreme court recites the testimony of Sergt. William E. Petty of New York, an expert on revolvers and ammunition, who examined the weapon. He weighed its bullets and counted their grooves.

He said: "This revolver was called in its time the American Bulldog Thirty-eight. It was manufactured by the Winchester Repeating Arms company. They ceased to make and sell it in 1890. The weapon has this peculiarity. When it is fired the trigger must be released—the trigger finger must cease to press it—before it is cocked for another discharge."

While the sergeant examined the bullets, Colonel Blake made a note of this illuminating fact.

"These cartridges were undoubtedly made for the Winchester-Colt revolver," the sergeant resumed. "They are thirty-eight caliber, long, central-fire cartridges, with a square base. The weight, the shape of the point, the form and faces of the cannelures leave no room for doubt."

Colonel Blake learned that the trade in northern New York bought their supplies of Winchester arms and ammunition from a store of the company in Utica.

On his return the colonel stopped at this store. Its record of sales for some years prior to 1890 were still on file. A bookkeeper was paid to make an immediate survey of those records and ascertain to what tradesmen in St. Lawrence county the American Bulldog revolver had been sold. His report was that only one revolver of that type had been sold in St. Lawrence county. It had been shipped in September, 1889, with three boxes of thirty-eight caliber, long, central-fire cartridges to fit it, to E. J. Bonfield, a hardware dealer of the village of Massena.

A little later Shad went with Colonel Blake to Massena. They learned that Mr. Bonfield had sold his stock and gone out of business in 1890. His goods had gone to some merchant in Norwalk. Shad and the district attorney drove to that small town, which was five miles from Ashfield. In the general store run by Cobb and Maxwell they found the long resting-place of the antiquated weapon which had killed Oscar Perry. Mr. Cobb had bought the revolver and its boxes of cartridges from Bonfield in 1889.

"To whom and when did you sell it?" the colonel asked.

Mr. Cobb answered: "We sold it cheap to old Bumpy Brown, the tinker. He said that he was getting it for another man who wanted to shoot some cats."

"This is important evidence. Why didn't you report it to me?" was the query of the district attorney.

"Well, I was in California when Bumpy was arrested. I didn't get back until a week ago. I thought that I'd wait and see what happened."

"Have you any idea or suspicion as to the last owner of this weapon?"

"No, sir, but I think that Brown told me the truth."

As Colonel Blake and his young clerk went to the hotel for supper the former said:

"This is a curious case. Again it comes up to Bumpy Brown. We'll know more of this matter before we sleep."

They returned to Canton by the evening train and drove directly to the jail. Bumpy was brought out to the sheriff's office to talk with them. He put his hands on Shad's shoulders and looked in his eyes and exclaimed:

"My boy! Don't you lose faith in me."

"Never," Shad answered.

The colonel spoke: "This boy had almost convinced me of your innocence until I learned today that a part of your testimony is false. You once owned a revolver."

Bumpy answered:

"No, I didn't. I bought a revolver one day at Cobb and Maxwell's in Norwalk, but I bought it for another man. I never owned it a minute. I took it to Robert Royce that day. He said that in travelin' around I might see a chance to buy a good revolver cheap. If I did, I was to git it for him. The island was overrun with cats. He wanted to shoot some of 'em. He gave me exactly what the revolver an' cartridges cost. It was a five-dollar bill he gave me. It had been tore in the middle an' pasted together. He said he had got it from Henry Lockwood that day an' that he'd guarantee it was good."

"Was anyone present when you delivered the revolver?"

"Not as I remember of, no sir. He was alone in the shop. He went upstairs an' got a present for me. It was a knit muffler with his initials wove into it. He said that he never used it."

"What did you do with that five-dollar bill that was torn in the middle?" Colonel Blake asked.

Bumpy Brown thought a moment.

"Well, sir, I might as well tell you—I give it to my wife to keep for me."

"Your wife!" the colonel exclaimed.

"I thought that your wife had been dead for years."

"I don't blame ye fer thinkin' so," the old man went on, "I put her in her grave years ago, but she ain't dead, no, sir. She's up there in that little shack o' mine an' lookin' at me an' talkin' to me, just as she used to, every day I'm to home. I miss her awful when I'm away."

The old man paused and wiped his eyes with his handkerchief and continued:

"Ye see, I alwus used to give her the money to keep. We lived com'fable. I never got drunk them days—never. I done well. There on the wall she's argued with me 'bout my foolishness an' I promised her that I wouldn't do it no more an' I agreed that I'd give her the money to save just as I used to. Now, what I say is private. I took down her pictur' off the wall an' morticed the back o' the frame an' put a slide over the mortice so neat ye couldn't see it. Every week I slipped some money into that hole in the frame. It was like givin' it to her to keep for me."

"I'll take you to Brown's cove tomorrow and we'll see if we can find that five-dollar bill."

"Well, sir, you'll find out that I ain't no liar," said Bumpy. "If I do any murderin' it must be that I do it in my sleep. I ain't never ketched myself in the act—not yet."

As Shad and Colonel Blake were leaving the jail the latter said: "It is almost clear to me that the old man has been the victim of a plot. I think that we shall soon be done with him save as a witness."

The sheriff drove out to Brown's cove next day with the district attorney and the tinker. They found the mended bill with other money in the hiding place Bumpy had described. Henry Lockwood was at his farm near the cove. He identified the five-dollar bill in question. He gave it to Royce in paying a bill and guaranteed its validity. In doing so he had made a note in his memorandum book of its number. The identification was perfect.

As they left Lockwood's house the district attorney said to the old man: "It does look as if your wife was still alive. I think that she is going to get you out of this scrape."

"Oh, she—she's a wonderful woman!" said the tinker. "I could always count on her in the day o' need."

Colonel Blake's mind was nearing its decision. The tan suit, the motive, the possession of the revolver and the rubbers seemed clearly to indicate the guilt of Royce.

Monument Records Deed of Cross-Eyed Heroine

A cross-eyed woman has been honored by a monument at Hartwell, Ga. Nancy Hart, whose memory is thus preserved, and her husband built a cabin in the hills, and were rearing a family when the Revolutionary war broke out.

While the men were away five red-coats surprised Nancy and a little girl in the cabin and ordered the woman to prepare a meal for them. Nancy, watching for an opportunity, grabbed one of the muskets and killed one of the soldiers. She then seized another gun and threatened to shoot any of the four that made resistance.

Because of her crossed eyes, none of King George's men could tell which one Nancy was looking at, so they all stood still until the men came back to see what all the shooting was for, and hanged the four soldiers. Subsequently the town of Hartwell and Hart county, of which it is the county seat, were named for the cross-eyed heroine.

Congress voted a fund for the erection of a monument to Nancy Hart.

EVEN WILD ZULUS TAKE TO "TALKIES"

White Man's Genius Scores Another Triumph.

Zululand, still the abode of witch-doctors, evil spirits, and polygamy, is being tamed by the talkies. A South African film company, equipped with the latest type of sound apparatus, has acquired the right to "shoot" pictures in the heart of a vast native reserve into which the probing white fingers of civilization have scarcely penetrated.

The first sound-film of the Zulus was made last year when the impis of Solomon Dinizulu and other paramount chiefs assembled in force outside Eshowe to bid farewell to their beloved high commissioner, the earl of Athlone. For the first time in history townsmen heard the menace of naked black feet marching across the veld. Then, to finish all, the full-throated, never-to-be-forgotten "Batyete!" the royal salute shouted in honor of the Great White Chief.

Unlike most subject races, the Zulu retains the characteristics we always associate with him. His stabbing assegai may have been beaten into a plowshare, but he still carries his knobkerrie and a cowhide shield; he still barbers his cattle for wives, years a moochie, or abbreviated loin-cloth, and has a physique any white man would envy—provided, that is,

he has never left his native kraal to work in the towns.

The talkie era in Zululand has not dawned without incident. The camera man, used to taking pictures of "boys" in the mine compounds along the Reef, finds he has to adopt a different technique when he sets out to film raw Zulus.

He must have skilled interpreters for one thing, boundless patience for another. He must not attempt to take a film without first of all consulting the local oracle, in other words, the witch-doctor. If the spirit of M'kosi's great-grandmother decrees that the film must be taken in the middle of a thunderstorm, the white man will have to use all his persuasive powers to hear the verdict of another ancestor less ignorant of sound-photography. Even then the "movie" man has to overcome the aversion of all pure-bred Zulus to being photographed; he has to demonstrate that the "eye-that-speaks" is harmless.

Mr. Joseph Albrecht, one of the pioneers of South Africa film production, is looking for a Zulu "star." All he asks is—she must not be afraid of the camera.

To accustom Zulus to talkies, the first speaking film of themselves was shown recently at an open-air indaba in Ginginhlovu. Warriors and women from all parts of the territory came along to see what the white man's latest medicine was like. For the first five minutes there was deep silence, then a startled chorus of "O-ow's" and wild pandemonium.

The audience took to their heels as one man—but they came back! Talkies had justified themselves.—London Tit-Bits.

Tell-Tale Invention

"Please arrest me" is in effect, the message conveyed by a new German invention designed to aid the police in capturing "hit-and-run" automobile drivers. The moment a car hits a person or another vehicle, the device, located under the chassis, is said to raise a white plate with a winking red light above the license plate, and also automatically to disconnect and lock the speedometer, thus showing the rate of speed at which the car was traveling at the time of the accident.

The invention, of course, is valueless unless laws compelling its universal use are passed and unless the key is kept by the police to prevent unscrupulous motorists from tampering with the telltale mechanism.

BIG DAY DRAWS ATTENTION ON KANKAKEE FAIR

Illinois Day at Show to See State Gathering of Public Leaders.

People prominent in public life and Republican leaders throughout the state of Illinois will be in attendance at the Kankakee Inter-State Fair on Tuesday, August 16th, in order to celebrate Illinois Day at the eminent exposition of which former Governor Len Small, who is also the Republican nominee for governor in the November election, has been the guiding head for many years.

Celebrated Republican leaders from all parts of the state have accepted invitations to be present. The attendance of almost the entire state Republican ticket to be presented to the voters in the fall election is a certainty.

With the titular Republican state leader as the genial host, prospects are in sight for a political get-together and confab of great importance which, in the estimation of veteran observers, will have a significant bearing upon the political situation preceding the fall election.

Illinois Day at the Kankakee Fair, which has sometimes been called Republican Day, has grown to be an institution of long standing. Political leaders are always in attendance and numerous political conferences are the rule of the occasion.

With the Presidential year election looming importantly, Illinois Day at the Kankakee Fair will see more politics in the making than ever before, and leaders from every county in the state are planning to attend.

Former Governor at Head. Former Governor Len Small, who was nominated in April to head the Republican ticket as the gubernatorial choice in the November election, has been the active secretary of the Kankakee Fair for forty years, building it up during that time from a tiny, bankrupt "pumpkin show" to one of the foremost expositions of the mid-west.

He was elected governor of Illinois in 1920, serving in that position until 1929. During his administration he gained prominence as "The Good Roads Governor." Under his direction 7,000 miles of concrete highways were constructed and Illinois was elevated from the mud-hole of the nation to the possession of the finest road system in the Union.

His previous administration is regarded as the most prosperous in the history of the state, a factor which is expected to play an important part in the success of the Republican ticket this fall.

The heavy thunderstorm of Tuesday morning left Mokena without light and power when the Public Service transformer northeast of Mokena was burned out by lightning. Nearly everytime that there is a thunderstorm the Public Service line northeast of Mokena is out of commission. The company engineers claim they have done everything possible to avoid this interruption of service, but have been unsuccessful in their efforts. Folks having electric clocks cannot rely on them as they stop when the service is interrupted and they are anywhere from 10 minutes to several hours late when service is resumed, especially is this the case when service is interrupted during the night. Electric ice boxes, stoves and radios are put out of service when the service is interrupted.

Recently Mokena had trouble with its light and power. The Public Service Company sent men out to locate the trouble and found that 4 young thrushes were the cause of the trouble. The birds had lit on a high tension line northeast of Mokena and had caused an arc which pitted the wires badly, putting the line out of commission. The badly burnt bodies of the four birds were found at the foot of a pole.

Misses Lucille and Rosalin Fisher of Ohio have been spending a week with Grace Moriarty. They are now visiting in Joliet with their uncle and aunt.

Chinch Bugs Cause Damage on Farms

Farmers in this section have been pestered with chinch bugs in barley fields some crops being ruined by this pest. The bugs have also invaded corn fields and have created damage there. The bugs do not fly, but crawl and to prevent them from going all over the field a strip of ground is covered with creosote and the bugs do not go beyond this border.

The state department of conservation, at its wild fowl propagation plant on the Illinois State fair grounds, has proven, conclusively, that quail, of all ages, will devour chinch bugs. Pans of the bugs, captured in Piatt county and given to the state for experimental purposes, were placed before quail that ranged from one-day to seven weeks old. They all ate greedily, according to the quail farm superintendent, Stephen Hair.

that is the cause. Wherever there is effect, there is a cause and vice versa wherever there is a cause, there is an effect.

Look after your pains in due time.
Consult your physician if you are not sure of the cause. Some pains are imaginary but real acute pain is not a thing of imagination. No one can in his right mind claim that a toothache or the pangs of a local infection is simply the matter of fancy.
You only need to go thru the experience to know it is real. Many people pay no attention to this kindly ed in his wisdom and mercy to protect us against infringement of nature's laws.

Pain is our good Watchman at the gate of life. If we did not feel the sense of pain when we put our hand in the fire we would perhaps leave our hand in the fire until it was entirely consumed before we would be aware of it.

Respect your pains.
And when you have them, say to yourself that it is a warning to me that I am not living or eating or doing right. It sometimes takes the doctor to find the cause.

It is said that Smith wrote "America" in less than half an hour and Doctor Tillet, in commenting upon it in "The Methodist Hymnal, Annotated," says: "The author had not the remotest idea that the words he dashed off thus hurriedly would ever become a favorite with any lovers of music and song, much less become the national hymn of a great and growing nation. National hymns do not become such by virtue of their loftiness of poetic thought and expression, but because they have in them that indefinable, simple something that gets into the hearts of the people. Greater national songs than this have been written—hymns surpassing it in dignity and nobility of thought—but it is doubtful if we shall ever have in America a national hymn more popular with the people than this."
